HAPPY MOTHERS' DAY!

GSSG's host moms have cooked and cleaned, carted to and from school, helped with homework, consoled, comforted, and wiped away tears, gone to parent-teacher meetings, worried about visas, shopped for shoes, clothes, and school supplies, made doctor and dental appointments, cared for those who were sick, even when they were sick themselves, and all the rest that moms do, but above all they supplied what every youth needs most, a mother's selfless love! Thanks, moms! Happy Mothers' Day!

GSSG's students are selected on the basis of seven criteria: poverty, honesty, integrity, personality, character, intelligence, and leadership potential. Let us pay tribute today also to the moms who raised their sons and daughters to meet GSSG's high standards, despite deep poverty and illiteracy, often living in homes with a dirt floor, a grass roof, and no electricity or running water. Likely as not, they do their laundry in a river, can only despair of medical/dental care, and get up at 4:00 in the morning to make tortillas on an open fire, usually the only sustenance they can provide. Not least of all, many of them speak only Q'eqchi', effectively cut off from the outside world. Their only hope for a better life lies in their sons and daughters. Let us join together in wishing them a Happy Mothers' Day too.
